

Human Services Infrastructure (HSI)-Community Action Program (CAP)

2017 Funding Impact in Connecticut

Connecticut's Community Action Agencies (CAAs) are the state and federal designated, antipoverty agencies covering all 169 cities and towns.

CAAs help families and the state solve problems, avoid crises, and save money.

HSI-CAP is a comprehensive, multigenerational, customer-focused, proven, integrated service delivery system that allows CAAs to:

- Provide basic services like food, shelter, heating assistance, and child care.
 - Implement the 'no door is a wrong door' approach to connecting limited income individuals and families with the programs, services and resources they need to reach short and long-term economic stability.
 - Leverage $140 of additional funds for every $1 of HSI-CAP funds. That's $380M in additional local, federal and private funds for vital programs and services.
 - Use this funding as a state match for federal funds, which doubles the value of the line item.

Last year, Connecticut's CAAs served over 357,500 people through referrals, direct services, and comprehensive case management:

- Over 57,600 barriers to initial or continuous employment were reduced or eliminated through job training, childcare, and other employment services.
 - Over $8.1 million in federal income tax refunds were returned to communities through our VITA (free tax preparation assistance) program.
 - Over 90,000 households avoided crises with energy assistance.

It is critical that the HSI-CAP line item, the "core funding" for CAAs, remain in place. The proposed changes will severely hinder the ability of our network to effectively fight the causes and conditions of poverty in Connecticut.

HSI-CAP funds are a smart investment in our human service delivery system.
